Thank you for visiting the GSHF website and for reviewing our privacy policy. Our policy is clear: We collect no information about you, other than information automatically collected and stored (see below), when you visit our website unless you choose to provide that information to us.

Information Automatically Collected and Stored

When you browse through the Wellspring website, certain personal information about you can be collected. We automatically collect and temporarily store the following information about your visit:

The name of the domain you use to access the Internet (for example, aol.com if you are using an American Online account or stanford.edu if you are connecting from Stanford University's domain)

- The date and time of your visit
- The pages you visited
- The type of browser and operating system used to access our site
- The address of the website you came from when you came to visit.

We use this information for statistical purposes and to help us make our site more useful to visitors. Unless it is specifically stated otherwise, no additional information will be collected about you. No information about GSHF users/visitors will be sold, shared, or utilized in any commercial way.

Personal Information

You do not have to give us personal information to visit our website.

If you choose to provide us with additional information about yourself through an e-mail message, form, survey, etc., we will maintain only the information as long as needed to respond to your question or to fulfill the stated purpose of the communication.

However, all communications addressed to GSHF or the GSHF webmaster are maintained, as required by law, for historical purposes. These communications are archived monthly, but also are protected by the Privacy Act, which restricts our use of them yet permits certain disclosures.

Cookies?

No, we do not use cookies. But we may collect information about your computer or other access device to mitigate risk, and for fraud prevention purposes.

Disclosure

GSHF does not disclose, give, sell, or transfer any personal information about our visitors unless required for law enforcement or statute. We may also release your information when we believe release is appropriate to comply with the law, enforce our site policies, or protect our or others' rights, property, or safety.

Our Commitment to Our Donors

We will not sell, share or trade our donors' names or personal information with any other entity, nor send mailings to our donors on behalf of other organizations. This policy applies to all information received by GSHF, both online and offline, on any Platform ("Platform", includes the GSHF's website and mobile applications), as well as any electronic, written, or oral communications.

To the extent any donations are processed through a third-party service provider, our donors' information will only be used for purposes necessary to process the donation.

Minors

We are especially concerned about protecting children's privacy. We urge parents and teachers to be involved in children's Internet browsing. It is particularly important for parents to guide their children when children are asked to provide personal information online. We always suggest that children get their parent's or guardian's permission before providing any information online at our site or any other site and hope parents and guardians will always be involved in those decisions. Most importantly, when children do provide information through this web site, it is used only to enable us to respond to the writer, and not to create profiles of children. The information is all subject to the Privacy Act. Parents can request for any personal information to be removed by sending an email here.
